

Raising Bookworms

Getting Kids Reading for Pleasure and Empowerment

“Reading is more than a pastime. In today’s world, it’s a survival skill.”

- Secretary Spellings, National Reading First Conference

“How can I get my child to put down the electronic games and pick up a book?”

Eighty-two percent of parents wish their kids read more... and studies show that parents overwhelmingly view reading as the most important skill a child needs to develop. Children who read well do better in all aspects of school and beyond... but the disturbing fact is that reading as a preferred activity has declined dramatically in recent years. How can we help?

Raising Bookworms* offers...

- Broad Appeal

Targeted to parents, caregivers, educators, and anyone interested in young people - or in reading as a powerful and valuable life skill

- In-Depth Information

Why reading is so essential for success, and revealing statistics about reading - today and in the future

- A Fresh and Creative Approach

How to build - or restore - the critical connection between reading and pleasure

- Clear, Accessible and Readable Format

Written in a reader-friendly, conversational style

- Hundreds of creative strategies and tactics

Techniques for engaging the most reluctant readers, and reading aloud with children of all ages

- Recommendations and Resources

How to find the best books for young readers, as well as valuable resource and reference lists

- Answers to Frequently Asked Questions

Addresses developmental issues, literacy questions, the impact of television and the internet, and engaging older children and reluctant readers

Emma Walton Hamilton has co-authored 16 children’s books with her mother, actress/author Julie Andrews, four of which have been on the NY Times best-seller list, and is the Editorial Director of the Julie Andrews Collection publishing program. As Co-Founder of Bay Street Theatre, she created and managed unique performance, writing and education programs for young audiences for over 15 years. She writes and speaks regularly on the topics of literacy and the arts.

Title Information

ISBN-13: 978-0-9815833-0-3

ISBN-10: 0-9815833-0-X LCCN: 2008902969

Pub. Date: 12/15/08

Pages: 208

Trim Size: 6X9

Retail Price: $14.95

Published by:

Beech Tree Books

PO Box 839, Sag Harbor, NY 11963

www.beechtreebooks.com

Available for order through:

AtlasBooks

Phone: 1-800-BookLog

Fax: 1-419-281-6883

E-mail: orders@AtlasBooks.com

Also available through Baker & Taylor; Ingram

"This essential guide to raising readers connects children with the joy of discovering the world through books. The message is simple: Children can learn to love reading books. Caring attentive adults can make the difference, and that difference changes lives."

Leonard Kniffel

Editor in Chief, American Libraries

www.raisingbookworms.com